WASHINGTON—

Fighter jets scrambled over Washington on Wednesday when a plane breached restricted air space prompting the evacuation of the White House and the US Congress amid fears of a Sept. 11-style attack, but the president was not told until he finished a bicycle ride.

The light private Cessna had ignored calls from air traffic controllers and entered the restricted air zone around Washington, coming within 5 km of the White House before turning away, authorities said.

Fighter jets

The plane's approach sent two F-16 fighter jets into the air over the US capital and thousands of staff and tourists into the streets outside the White House, Capitol building and Supreme Court in an urgent evacuation.

The US Customs service also scrambled Black Hawk helicopters during the alert, which the White House characterized as the most serious since the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks by hijacked airliners on New York and Washington.

But President George W. Bush was on a bicycle ride at a suburban wildlife preserve in nearby Maryland at the time and was not told about the crisis until the end of his bike ride and some 40 minutes after the "all-clear" was given.

Vice President Dick Cheney who was at the White House at the time was quickly evacuated, White House spokesperson Scott McClellan said, and Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld was told about the incident just before noon, around the time it happened.

Accidental

Homeland Security Department officials said the Secret Service determined the air intrusion appeared to be accidental and no charges would be filed against the two men on board.

First lady Laura Bush and former first lady Nancy Reagan, who was visiting, were rushed to a secure location on the White House grounds, McClellan said.

"A determination was made that the threat posed no danger to the president since he was at an off-site location, and protocols were in place to protect people in the area of the threat," McClellan said.

"Those protocols did not require any presidential authority."

"Given such circumstances and the fact that the plane turned away from the White House, the decision was made to inform the president upon conclusion of his bike ride," McClellan added.

The two fighters, which scrambled from nearby Andrews Air Force base, intercepted the Cessna and fired four flares to get the pilot's attention before escorting the plane to nearby Frederick, Maryland, officials said.

To the right of this is a poster for 'Billie Lawrence' with the text 'Billie Lawrence is back' and 'Finally... she's back!'. Below the 'Cokeville' sign is a poster for 'Spring' with the text 'Spring' and 'Sanyo'. To the right of the 'Spring' poster is a poster for 'Sanyo' with the text 'Sanyo' and 'Sanyo'. At the bottom left is a poster for 'Go Home' with the text 'Go Home' and 'Go Home'. At the bottom right is a poster for 'Sanyo' with the text 'Sanyo' and 'Sanyo'.

Py-Base in Polystyrene.

Py-Base was prepared by the reaction of 100 mg of 2,2,2-trifluoroethylamine with 100 mg of sodium hydride in 100 ml of THF. The mixture was stirred for 24 h at room temperature. The mixture was then added to 100 ml of THF and the solution was stirred for 24 h at room temperature. The mixture was then added to 100 ml of THF and the solution was stirred for 24 h at room temperature. The mixture was then added to 100 ml of THF and the solution was stirred for 24 h at room temperature.

1. The first step is to identify the variables in the model. In this case, the variables are:

- Dependent variable: Y
- Independent variable: X
- Control variable: Z

2. The second step is to specify the functional form of the relationship between the variables. This is typically done by assuming a linear relationship, which can be written as:

$$Y = \beta_0 + \beta_1 X + \beta_2 Z + \epsilon$$
 where β_0 , β_1 , and β_2 are the coefficients to be estimated, and ϵ is the error term.

3. The third step is to estimate the coefficients using a method such as ordinary least squares (OLS). This involves minimizing the sum of the squared residuals, which can be done using matrix algebra or software.

4. The fourth step is to test the statistical significance of the coefficients. This is typically done using t-tests or F-tests, which compare the estimated coefficients to their standard errors.

5. The fifth step is to interpret the results of the model. This involves understanding the meaning of the coefficients and the overall fit of the model.

Figure 1 consists of two scatter plots. The top plot is titled 'Shrub Pollinivores' and the bottom plot is titled 'Flycatcher p. Long'. Both plots have 'Number of Species (S)' on the x-axis and 'Number of Genera (G)' on the y-axis. The x-axis ranges from 0 to 1000, and the y-axis ranges from 0 to 1000. Both plots show a positive correlation between S and G, with data points clustered around a diagonal line. The top plot has a slightly higher density of points than the bottom plot.

Figure 1. A schematic diagram of the experimental design. The diagram shows a sequence of events: a subject is presented with a stimulus (a word or picture), then a response is recorded (a button press or verbal response), and finally, the response is evaluated (a correct or incorrect response). The diagram also shows the flow of information between the subject and the experimenter, with the experimenter providing feedback and the subject providing responses.

1. The first step is to identify the key components of the system. This includes the hardware, software, and data.

2. The second step is to analyze the system's performance. This involves measuring the system's response time, throughput, and other metrics.

3. The third step is to identify the bottlenecks in the system. These are the areas where the system's performance is most degraded.

4. The fourth step is to implement optimizations. This can involve upgrading hardware, optimizing software, or changing the data structure.

5. The fifth step is to monitor the system's performance after the optimizations have been implemented. This helps to ensure that the system is still performing well and that the optimizations have been effective.

For many, the meaning of the word "art" is the same as the word "craft." The difference between the two is that art is a creative process, while craft is a technical process. Art is a way of life, while craft is a way of making things. Art is a way of expressing oneself, while craft is a way of making things for others. Figure 1 displays a sequence of 16 grayscale images arranged in a 4x4 grid, illustrating the degradation and restoration of a handwritten digit '4'. The images are organized into two rows of eight. The top row shows the original image and the first seven levels of salt-and-pepper noise, with the digit becoming increasingly obscured. The bottom row shows the results of applying a proposed restoration algorithm to the images in the top row, with the digit '4' being clearly restored in all cases, including the most degraded image.
